

Lisbon, Feb 4, 2013. The Holiday season is now well past into the realms of history. Filipa is back in the US for what will be her last semester in HS; Ben is back in school here in Portugal; and Lucy and I are slowly getting back to our routine, enjoying as much as we can what should be our last winter on this side of the Atlantic for some time.

On the work "front," I was recently interviewed for the Luso-Americano, the newspaper of the Portuguese community on the East Coast of the US. One whole page (page 4) with a lead to it on the front page (where I appear between leads to articles on Obama and on Kerry): not bad at all! Also newsworthy, in an effort to better monetize some of my past photos, I have decided that Adamastor Travel will soon enter into the business of the pictured note cards. For a bit more on these two "stories," take a peek at the "Slow Roads!" page.

...And that's all for today, folks! Stay tuned to the next one. Jorge.
