

Chevy Chase, Mar 28, 2014 March proved to be a rather interesting month for the family: Lucy spent about three weeks in Khartoum, Sudan (one photo, all there is of her trip, below); Filipa came here and stayed with me during her Spring Break; and then, when she left, I went on a little trip south to Key West, in FL (see below as well). To compensate for the months when nothing happens, I guess...!

Weather-wise, things are beginning to improve, but ever so slowly. As a matter of fact, coincidentally (or not), as I was on my trip, I missed two snow-storms in DC: the first one a few days after I left, and the second one on the day before I arrived. Let's see if this thing starts to improve once and for all, because there is a lot of places to go to, and things to see!

Cheers. Jorge.
