

Chevy Chase, May 26, 2014 Let me just start by telling you that this has been an extremely busy two-month stretch. On Saturday, May 10, I had my first photo exhibit. Making matters even more interesting on this front, the exhibit was at the Portuguese Embassy here in Washington, DC. For a bit more on this event, see below.

It was also in early May that my project "The Americas: Top to Bottom" was announced to the public. Finally! ...And what is this thing, you ask? I am talking about a "little" road trip. Road trip? Gooooood. Like. Tell me more, tell me more... I am talking about a road trip on my motorcycle from here to Alaska and then hopefully all the way south to Patagonia, Argentina!!! Altogether, close to 31,000 miles (50,000 km). The first part (from here to Alaska and then to Panama) is already guaranteed. Planned departure date? Sunday August 3. The second part (the South America bit), well, that one still depends on the success of my fund raising efforts.

So spread the word, share the link, help with the dream!!!

Cheers. Jorge.
